K PROGRAM FOLIO A

MARCH 14 - 27, 1960

KPFA 94.1 MC FM
KPFB 89.3 MC

EACH ONE REACH ONE

Next to listening to KPFA, one of the greatest pleasures in "belonging" to Pacifica is the idea of sharing. Over the years you, our subscribers, have been the most important and most active source of new converts to the cause. We like this. We like to think that our own activities in raising money to keep KPFA going and growing are but the beginnings of a series of chain reactions out there.

You will receive this Folio in the closing days of our annual predeficit fund drive . . . the best of all possible times to carry on these KPFA chain reactions. Look through the Folio (we hope the new little "highlight boxes" scattered here and there will help you plan your listening), and make a particular note of the programs you might want to share with non-subscribing friends (or is that a contradiction in terms?). Have them over for a program or two, and then hit 'em hard. When they seem ready to succumb to the temptation of subscribing, send us twelve dollars out of your own pocket in their name. (Make sure they're watching.) If this doesn't jar their conscience, nothing will, and you have merely invested twelve dollars in finding out who your friends really are. A worthwhile expenditure.

KPFA now has 7500 subscribers. It is on the air 6101 hours a year. If every subscriber found us one more to share his own .814 hour with, we wouldn't have to put articles like this on the front of the Folio. They're much harder to write, and much less fun, than the ones about programs. Please work for KPFA now,

7:00 THE FILM ART: Gideon Bachmann interviews Jacques Tati, director and star of such French comedies as "The Big Day," "Mr. Hulot's Holiday" and "Mon Oncle." Although M. Tati's verbal communication with his audiences up to now, in films at any rate, has been largely confined to grunts, Mr. Bachmann assures us that there's more to him than that. Recorded at WBAI, New York.

7:30 THE SIGN OF FOUR: a Sherlock Holmes story by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, dramatized as a serial in five parts by Felix Felton, with Richard Burn-dall as Holmes and Bryan Coleman as Dr. Watson. Part one: "The Science of Deduction."

8:00 DRAMA IN AMERICA: Origins. First program in a new series devoted to American drama. The series will be in two parts, using, whenever possible, plays and parts of plays from commercial and studio productions. The first section of the series will be concerned with the history of American drama; the second, with the position of American drama in a world context. Conducted by Dale Minor.

9:00 OF MICE AND MEN: Herbert Coggins, author of a recently published children's book "I am a Mouse," talks with Marsh Maslin, book critic of the San Francisco News-Call-Bulletin and an old friend of the author.

THE EMPEROR JONES (Sunday, March 27)

The Emperor Jones, an American negro ex-convict, has built up his small and short-lived but profitable empire on one of the smaller West Indian islands, outside the scope of white men's jurisdiction. The play begins at the moment when his 'subjects' revolt against his rapacity and cruelty. He sets out alone to make his escape through the forest to the coast . . . the forest he has hunted in so often that he thinks he knows it like the back of his hand. But his Cockney henchmen warns him "Ternight when it's pitch black they'll 'ave their pet devils an' ghosts 'oundin' after you. You'll find yer 'air'll be standin' on end before termorrow mornin'." The Cockney knows the forest and the natives better than does Jones, their 'Emperor,' whose illusions of power and success turn to helpless panic as the ominous beating of the native tom-toms grows louder and faster in the darkness; ghosts from his guilty past appear, and the forest still stretches black and endless before him. "The Emperor Jones" was one of Eugene O'Neill's earlier works, but his supreme mastery of stagecraft is already evident in it. The title role which has become an almost classic test of a Negro actor's skill is taken in this BBC production by William Marshall, an American actor who has received great praise for his radio and television appearances in England.
